I teach at the intersection of art culture and technology.

More and more I realize that culture and technology are synonymous terms. One could not exist without the other. E.I. Tech of fire gave us tech of language which fostered an explosion of information exchanges that allow for cultures to thrive.

The internet is the current expression of this desire to connect and communicate. We, our culture, needs a thriving internet.

It should not be co-opted (any more than it is) by individuals with power and wealth. We need a fair internet.

It is our right as Americans. If you haven't been to China, you don't know the freedoms you truly have over here.

Let's call this one off!
Chris Willey